Introduction

eHeat Ireland (EHI) is an all-Ireland body led by industry experts who are committed to promoting the use of renewable electricity to generate decarbonised heat as an economically viable alternative to fossil fuels.

Through the single voice of the EHI we develop policy and engage with key stakeholders such as, legislators, DETE, DECC, CRU, ESB Networks, EirGrid, SEAI, to lobby for change that will ensure eHeat becomes a competitive alternative to fossil fuel.

What it means for you:

- As a member of the EHI you will become part of an active community of companies that have a common interest in decarbonising heat and lowering carbon emissions
- You will have access to the extensive knowledge base and experience of our existing members already working with electric heat technologies, and benefit from our knowledge of international best practice such as the Science Based Targets (SBTs) and the established Scope 1,2 & 3 framework on CO2 emissions.
- You will have the opportunity to influence discussion and make a valuable contribution to developments within the EHI committee and working group frameworks.
- You will have access to the detailed research and analysis underpinning findings in commissioned reports.
- As a member of the EHI you will be demonstrating active support for the zero-carbon ambition and the decarbonisation of heat in Ireland.
- EHI will ensure that you are fully up to date with the latest eHeat technology innovation and all relevant policy and regulatory changes impacting the commercial viability of eHeat in Ireland
